Insight

The Department of Languages and Cultures prepares students for the challenges and opportunities in the multilingual, multicultural world we inhabit.

Majoring in a language means developing advanced communicative proficiency in the language and gaining a deeper understanding of the people and places where the language is spoken. Knowledge of a foreign language also deepens understanding of one's own language, values, and traditions and fosters a greater appreciation of cultural differences. Area studies majors further attain an interdisciplinary perspective on a diverse and dynamic region of the world.

Experience

Language instruction in the Department of Languages and Cultures (LANC) is oriented toward practical usage. In addition to Spanish for both non-natives and heritage speakers, LANC offers Spanish courses for professional applications in fields such as health care and business. Learners can develop their creative writing ability or hone their translation skills. Students also have the opportunity to participate in community-based internships or to gain mentored, hands-on language teaching experiences. Extracurricular offerings include weekly language conversation hours, academic honor societies, and cultural clubs that host a variety of activities and events each year.

Many LANC students opt to spend part of their time at California State University, Chico studying abroad. A multitude of program options means that there is literally a choice to fit every student's needs. Whether you opt to spend a year abroad through one of the California State University International Programs, or a year, semester, or summer through AIFS, USAC, direct exchange, or via a faculty-led program abroad in one of dozens of locations, you will be able to apply that academic work toward a major or minor in languages and/or area studies, as well as toward another major or minor and/or General Education and other graduation requirements. A program advisor in LANC or a study abroad advisor can help you choose the program that is right for you.

Outlook

Intercultural competence opens the door to many exciting careers. Proficiency in a world language and/or a degree in area studies leads to careers in international business, marketing, foreign intelligence and diplomacy, travel and tourism, entertainment, media and public relations, communications, translation/interpretation, teaching, and many service professions, to name but a few. Students specifically interested in careers in language education in the U.S. or abroad can enhance their employment potential by completing the MA in Language Teaching.

At the same time, a language and/or area studies major enhances a candidate's attractiveness to employers in most career fields both at home and abroad. Proficiency in another language as well as the cultural awareness and general communication skills that are attained as part of the major are highly valued by employers.

Prerequisite: GE Oral Communication (A1); GE Written Communication (A2); GE Critical Thinking (A3); GE Mathematics/Quantitative Reasoning (B4) requirements, or consent of the instructor.

Typically Offered: Spring only

No part of the world has contributed more to our shared humanity than Africa. With more than a thousand million people speaking fifteen hundred languages in fifty-two countries, this vast continent challenges us to grasp diverse perspectives on value, meaning, and social life. To understand these, our course is full of music, film, arts, and literature, along with classic and innovative anthropological studies. First we study Africa's main geographical and cultural regions, and their deep histories of peoples, languages, and lifeways. Then we can consider how contemporary issues in spiritual life, family, gender, education, politics, public health, and environment are playing out, all amidst social change and rapid growth that will transform life on our planet for all of us in this twenty-first century. 3 hours lecture. Asian civilizations have endured far longer than the societies of Europe and North America. Asia was the center of global trade for thousands of years and remains a major hub for the movement of people, religions, philosophies, goods, and capital. Students in this course learn about the millennial societies and cultures of East and Southeast Asia. Students gain a glimpse into the lives and works of billions of people on the largest continent in the world and the transformations that have shaped Asia today and into the future, such as rise and fall of Angkor Wat, practices of shamanism, Colonialism, the Spice Trade, and Opium, Anime and Kawaii culture, and the global superpower of Communist China. 3 hours lecture. - EDSL 630 Teaching Second Language Writing 3 Units
Typically Offered: Fall only
 This graduate seminar is designed to engage future language instructors in teaching and learning of second/foreign language writing. We reflect on pertinent issues in teaching second language (L2) writing to linguistically and culturally diverse learners, both from a pedagogical and research perspective. Students in this course explore current approaches to L2 writing, including process-oriented, genre-focused, model-based, and task-based approaches. Through critical reading and interactive discussions, individual and group projects, and reflective activities, we explore differences between L1 and L2 writing; learners' beliefs and needs regarding L2 writing; scaffolding the writing process and designing effective writing tasks; peer collaboration and feedback in L2 writing; and assessing writing. Students in this course get hands-on experience in designing their own teaching materials, including an instructional unit for an L2 writing course. 3 hours seminar. (021961)
